Walnut

Sourced locally from sustainably managed forests primarily in New York and Pennsylvania. Characterized by a rich, classic brown color, and occasional burl grain.

Maple

Heart Pine (reclaimed)

Carefully selected from demolished buildings in and around New York, the Stickbulb Longleaf Pine is remarkable for red to golden brown tones and clearly defined, dense, old growth grain. Occasional nail holes and areas of discoloration speak to its rich history.

Water Tower Redwood (reclaimed)

Majestic Sequoia Sempervirens or Redwood, originating from the legendary forests of the West Coast is a stunning, old growth wood. Reclaimed from NYC Water Towers, years of exposure to the elements on one side and contact with water on the other result in a rich, red color threaded with occasional black veins.

Ebonized Oak

Sustainably sourced American Red Oak typically has a straight and open grain and permits easy staining. Hand-finished to produce a lustrous dark, blackened finish that allows the pronounced texture and grain of the wood to shine through.

STICKBULB
A large, illuminated, geometric structure made of sticks, resembling a complex, multi-layered diamond or cube. It is suspended from the ceiling and glows with a warm, golden light. The structure is composed of numerous interconnected sticks forming a series of overlapping diamond shapes. It is displayed in a gallery setting with a white wall and a dark floor. Several people are gathered around it, including a young child in a blue hoodie who is touching the structure. A man in a dark suit is also visible, looking at the structure. The background is a plain, light-colored wall.
